HAVE YOU HEARD WITH PATRICK WOLFF

MONDAY AT 9 PM

3/4 Albert Dailey

A promising star of jazz piano in the 60s and 70s, Albert Dailey brought a rich and complex post-bop sound to the bands of Stan Getz, Dexter Gordon & Art Blakey. His early death in the 80s cut short a great career, and most of his music remains outrageously out of print today.

3/11 Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra

One of the more challenging and rewarding projects of the great bassist Charlie Haden, this large ensemble played music that celebrated the power of protest against political injustice and explored the musical bonds that can hold improvisers together through chaos.

3/18 Barry Harris

A master of jazz piano in the tradition of Bud Powell and Thelonious Monk, Barry Harris is one of the last remaining giants of the 1950s. His delicate touch and deep understanding of bebop harmony elevated the bands of Cannonball Adderley, Hank Mobley, and others, and his indefatigable work as a teacher has inspired new generations to keep the flames burning.

3/25 John Tchicai

A truly original voice of the alto saxophone, John Tchicai brought much-needed intelligence and warmth to the free jazz movement of the 1960s through his work with the New York Art Quartet. Tchicai kept touring and constantly shifting and evolving until his death in 2012.

JAZZ NIGHT IN AMERICA WITH CHRISTIAN MCBRIDE

TUESDAY AT 9 PM

3/5 Makaya McCraven

Jazz Night in America is hanging in Chicago for a captivating concert led by the drummer/producer Makaya McCraven. With words by his parents Agnes and Stephen (both artists) we'll get to know the origin story that shaped his universal perspective, and peel back his complex compositional process informed by a synergy of electronic and acoustic music.

❖3/12 Remembering Marian McPartland

Jazz Night in America remembers NEA Jazz Master and Piano Jazz host, Marian McPartland, with personal insights from her longtime producer, Shari Hutchinson, and her granddaughter, Donna Gourdol. We'll hear outtakes from Piano Jazz, featuring Sarah Vaughan, Mary Lou Williams and Geri Allen. And of course, we'll hear the voice and piano of McPartland herself, a grande dame who was never anything but herself.

❖3/19 DIVA!

For every Count Basie there is often a forgotten female big band leader, overdue for recognition. Jazz Night in America remedies this by commemorating the DIVA Jazz Orchestra, and The International Sweethearts of Rhythm. Christian McBride, sits down with one of the original Sweethearts, Roz Cron, now 93 years old, in a heartwarming conversation.

❖3/26 Cyrille Aimée and Daymé Arocena

Vocalists Cyrille Aimée and Daymé Arocena, each a cultural ambassador as well as a cosmopolitan, with the elusive ability to bring any audience along for the ride, recorded live at the 2017 San Jose Jazz Summer Fest by KCSM Jazz 91.

PIANO JAZZ WITH MARIAN MCPARTLAND

WEDNESDAY AT 9 PM

❖3/6 Alice Coltrane

On this episode of Piano Jazz, Pianist/Composer Alice Coltrane shimmers on a set of her original tunes and honors the legacy of her husband, saxophonist John Coltrane. She also duets with host Marian McPartland in Trane's Giant Steps and Miles' Mode.

3/13 Dick Hyman

For this 2009 Piano Jazz, host McPartland welcomes back pianist Dick Hyman, who appeared on several programs throughout the years including the first season in 1979.

❖3/20 Amina Claudine Myers

On August 29th, 1991, Pianist/Composer Amina Claudine Myers joined Marian McPartland on Piano Jazz. Amina talked about her days as a junior high school music appreciation teacher, and they duet on Duke Ellington's Mood Indigo, Miles Davis' So What and Sonny Rollins' Sonnymoon for Two.

❖3/27 Sarah Vaughan

On this 1986 episode of Piano Jazz, Vaughan talks about her start as a jazz singer and explains how she uses the piano to learn her songs. She sings Tenderly and Poor Butterfly while host Marian McPartland plays, and the two join forces for My Funny Valentine.

JAZZ PROFILES WITH NANCY WILSON

THURSDAY AT 9 PM

❖3/7 Women in Jazz Part 1 in Celebration of International Women's Day (3/8)

Women have been involved with jazz since its inception, but all too often their achievements are not as well-known as those of their male counterparts. Of course we have Billie, Ella, and Sarah, but there are so many more—singers, instrumentalists and composers—that have made a worthy pantheon. Some early pioneering female jazz musicians like pianists Mary Lou Williams and Lil Hardin, and trumpeter Dolly Jones are featured.

❖3/14 Women in Jazz Part 2 in Celebration of Women's History Month

Part 1 of NPR's Jazz Profiles series on the role of women in jazz looked back on the early pioneering female jazz musicians. In this second part, the focus is on prominent female artists of more recent vintage, including the late trombonist Melba Liston, bandleader (and Grammy winner) Maria Schneider, and producer and impresario Cobi Narita.

❖3/21 Marian McPartland

A treasured jazz pianist, radio host of NPR's Piano Jazz, and educator, Marian McPartland has done as much as anyone to spread the word about jazz and to share its beauty with the general public. As a composer, her works such as In the Days of Our Love have enriched the jazz repertoire.

❖3/28 Melba Liston

Melba Liston (1926-1999) made her mark as one of the few women to succeed as a jazz instrumentalist, composer, and arranger. A trombonist in the '40s, '50s and '60s, she played in big bands and led her own group in the '70s and '80s. As an accomplished arranger, she brought musical life to the songs of artists as diverse as Billie Holiday, Gloria Lynne, Art Blakey, Milt Jackson, and even Marvin Gaye. And her musical collaboration with pianist Randy Weston for more than thirty years produced such critically acclaimed albums as The Spirits of Our Ancestors and Volcano Blues.
